Poland High Court Rules For Fetal Defect Abortion Ban

If women who support abortion were themselves aborted, the world would be a better place. I'm not advocating that; I'm simply being honest. Such is the case with a new law in Poland that virtually eliminates abortion, except in the three exceptions: rape, incest, life of mother. From CNN:

> Poland's highest court ruled Thursday that abortions due to fetal defects were unconstitutional. Around 98% of abortions in Poland had been conducted as a result of fetal defects, meaning the ruling bans virtually all terminations taking place in the country.

This is certainly a win for the prolife movement in Poland, a country that is majority Catholic anyway. Most countries to my knowledge in the past never really had abortion laws and if they did, like Ireland, the laws were enforced like murder laws. If you procured, funded, assisted at or performed an abortion in 1920s America, you wouldn't be tried for murder, nor at all really.

Many fetal defects it should be added are not absolute; some fetuses when born turn out to be healthy. What is definitely sad is the amount of protests by women in a Catholic country with the basic message that this is the end of women everywhere. How do you get women to get off their ass and do something? Tell them somewhere in the world, they can't kill their kids!
